Project idea: (summary of the challenge, investigation, scenario, problem or issue):
The issue for discussion (at least in our context) is that students are often given poetry to engage with and to analyse. The unit often ends with an extended response answering a set question or a task with fairly narrow parameters. While these measures are necessary for assessment I feel we are neglecting the 'after reading' phase of learning. Once they have completed the task where to from here? Where is the personal relevance, sense of agency and public authentic audience?

Driving question: What does poetry mean to me?

Outcomes: (skills, content, cross-curricula priorities, general capabilities):
Objective A, C, D & E
Student selected poetry, audience and expression cuts across all skills, cross curricula capabilities etc.

Hook lesson (to launch inquiry and engage students):
Put up the stimulus quote “Poetry is thoughts that breathe and words that burn”
Floor storming activity
Intro to guerilla poetry (image slideshow and the box of props)

Proficiencies (explicitly taught and assessed 'T+A' or encouraged 'E'):

Since this follows and connects with a very structured poetry unit, all of these are covered either during or prior to the PBL component

Culminating products and performances:
Individual:
Each student is required to create and display (in the manner they choose) self-selected poetry or self-created poetry and reflect on what this poetry means to them.
They email me photos which I then upload to our Instagram account
This way we have 2 public audiences - internal to the school and community and to the wider world

Group:
Group art installations are an option (some installations take more than one person) but the project is a personal one

GATS strategies embedded in teaching & learning:

For My Daughter

By Sarah McMane

“Never grow a wishbone, daughter, where your backbone ought to be.” – Clementine Paddleford

Never play the princess when you can be the queen:
rule the kingdom, swing a sceptre,
wear a crown of gold.
Don’t dance in glass slippers,
crystal carving up your toes -- be a barefoot Amazon instead,
for those shoes will surely shatter on your feet.
Never wear only pink
when you can strut in crimson red, sweat in heather grey, and
shimmer in sky blue,
claim the golden sun upon your hair.
Colors are for everyone,
boys and girls, men and women --
be a verdant garden, the landscape of Versailles, not a pale primrose blindly pushed aside.

Chase green dragons and one-eyed zombies,
fierce and fiery toothy monsters,
not merely lazy butterflies,
sweet and slow on summer days.
For you can tame the most brutish beasts with your wily wits and charm, and lizard scales feel just as smooth as gossamer insect wings.
Tramp muddy through the house in a purple tutu and cowboy boots.
Have a tea party in your overalls.
Build a fort of birch branches, a zoo of Legos, a rocketship of Queen Anne chairs and coverlets, first stop on the moon.

Dream of dinosaurs and baby dolls, bold brontosaurus and bookish Belle, not Barbie on the runway or Disney damsel in distress -- you are much too strong to play the simpering waif.
Don a baseball cap, dance with Daddy, paint your toenails, climb a cottonwood.
Learn to speak with both your mind and heart.
For the ground beneath will hold you, dear -- know that you are free.
And never grow a wishbone, daughter, where your backbone ought to be.
Explaining my Depression to My Mother; A Conversation

(Performance poetry - watch it on YouTube)

Mom, My depression is a shape shifter.
One day it is as small as a firefly in the palm of a bear
The next, it’s the bear.
On those days I play dead until the bear leaves me alone.
I call the bad days the dark days.
Mom said “try lighting candles”
When I see a candle, I see the flesh of a church.
The flicker of a flame
Sparks of a memory younger than noon
I am standing beside her open casket
It is the moment that I learn every person I ever come to know will someday die.
Besides mom
I’m not afraid of the dark.
Perhaps that’s part of the problem.
Mom said “I thought the problem was that you can’t get out of bed.”
I can’t.
Anxiety holds me a hostage inside of my house.
Inside of my head.
Mom says “where did anxiety come from?”
Anxiety is the cousin visiting from out of town.
Depression felt obligated to bring to the party.
Mom, I am the party.
Only I am a party I don’t want to be at.
Mom says “Why don’t you try going to actual parties? See your friends.”
Sure, I make plans.
I make plans but I don’t wanna go.
I make plans because I know I should want to go.
I know sometimes I would have wanted to go.
It’s just not that much fun having fun when you don’t want to have fun, mom.
You see mom,
Each night insomnia sweeps me up in his arms dips me in the kitchen in the small glow of the stove light.
Insomnia has this romantic way of making the moon feel like perfect company.
Mom says “try counting sheep”
But my mind can only count reasons to stay awake.
So I go for walks.
But my stuttering knee caps clank like silver spoons,
Held in strong arms with loose wrists.
They ring in my ears like clumsy church bells,
Reminding me I am sleepwalking on an ocean of happiness I cannot baptize myself in.
Mom says “Happy is a decision”
But my happy is hallow as a pin pricked egg.
My happy is a high fever that will break.
My mom says I am so good at making something out of nothing,
And then flat out asks me if I am afraid of dying.
No.
I am afraid of living.
Mom
I am lonely.
I think of how I learned when dad left how to turn the anger into lonely
The lonely into busy
So when I tell you
“I’ve been super busy lately”
I mean I’ve been falling asleep watching sports center on the couch to avoid confronting the empty side of my bed.
But my depression always drags me back to my bed,
Until my bones are the forgotten fossils of a skeleton sunken city.
My mouth a bone yard of teeth broken from biting down on themselves.
The hallow auditorium of my chest swoons with echoes of a heartbeat.
But I am a careless tourist here.
I will never truly know everywhere I have been.
Mom still doesn’t understand.
Mom! Can’t you see that neither can I?

The Summer Day
Who made the world?
Who made the swan, and the black bear?
Who made the grasshopper?
This grasshopper, I mean-
the one who has flung herself out of the grass,
the one who is eating sugar out of my hand,
who is moving her jaws back and forth instead of up and down-who is gazing around with her enormous and complicated eyes.
Now she lifts her pale forearms and thoroughly washes her face.
Now she snaps her wings open, and floats away.
I don't know exactly what a prayer is.
I do know how to pay attention, how to fall down into the grass, how to kneel down in the grass, how to be idle and blessed, how to stroll through the fields,
which is what I have been doing all day.
Tell me, what else should I have done?
Doesn't everything die at last, and too soon?
Tell me, what is it you plan to do with your one wild and precious life?

Tychbornes Elegie, written with his owne hand in the Tower before his execution

My prime of youth is but a frost of cares,
My feast of joy is but a dish of paine,
My Crop of corne is but a field of tares,
And al my good is but vaine hope of gaine.
The day is past, and yet I saw no sunne,
And now I live, and now my life is done.

My tale was heard, and yet it was not told,
My fruite is falne, & yet my leaves are greene:
My youth is spent, and yet I am not old,
I saw the world, and yet I was not seene.
My thred is cut, and yet it is not spunne,
And now I live, and now my life is done.

I sought my death, and found it in my wombe,
I lookt for life, and saw it was a shade:
I trod the earth, and knew it was my Tombe,
And now I die, and now I was but made.
My glasse is full, and now my glasse is runne,
And now I live, and now my life is done.
The Sunne Rising - John Donne

Busy old fool, unruly sun,
    Why dost thou thus,
Through windows, and through curtains call on us?
Must to thy motions lovers' seasons run?
    Saucy pedantic wretch, go chide
    Late school boys and sour prentices,
Go tell court huntsmen that the king will ride,
    Call country ants to harvest offices,
Love, all alike, no season knows nor clime,
Nor hours, days, months, which are the rags of time.

    Thy beams, so reverend and strong
    Why shouldst thou think?
I could eclipse and cloud them with a wink,
But that I would not lose her sight so long;
    If her eyes have not blinded thine,
    Look, and tomorrow late, tell me,
Whether both th' Indias of spice and mine
    Be where thou leftst them, or lie here with me.
Ask for those kings whom thou saw'st yesterday,
And thou shalt hear, All here in one bed lay.

    She's all states, and all princes, I,
    Nothing else is.
Princes do but play us; compared to this,
All honor's mimic, all wealth alchemy.
    Thou, sun, art half as happy as we,
    In that the world's contracted thus.
    Thine age asks ease, and since thy duties be
    To warm the world, that's done in warming us.
Shine here to us, and thou art everywhere;
This bed thy center is, these walls, thy sphere.
Lord of the lounge

It’s a good library.
Lots of books, sure,
and lounges soft and comfortable
for real reading,
and I choose one
in the corner
and I settle down
with a book about these kids stranded on a desert island and some try to live right but the others go feral and it’s s good book
and I’m there, on the island,
gorging on tropical fruit,
trying to decide
whose side I’m on.
And then it hits me.
I’m on neither.
I’d go off alone,
because you can’t trust
those who want to break the rules and you certainly can’t trust
those who make the rules,
so you do the only thing possible,
you avoid the rules.
That’s me,
on the deserted island
of a soft lounge
in Bendarat Library.
